Spotlight on Health Policy:

Measles Outbreak in Texas

A measles outbreak has resulted in more than 130 cases and the first US child death from the disease in a decade, primarily affecting unvaccinated people, especially children, in Texas.

How will this impact me? If you are one of the 92% of the US population who has received the measles vaccine, this outbreak shouldn't affect you much, but unvaccinated individuals remain at high risk of infection and complications.

My thoughts: This tragic outbreak is a direct consequence of spreading misleading information about vaccines, and unfortunately, Health Secretary Robert F. Kennedy Jr. has played a role in perpetuating these false claims.

RFK Jr. Vows to Fight Childhood Chronic Disease Epidemic

RFK Jr. noted ending the childhood chronic disease epidemic will be a top priority of his during his time at HHS.

of bad science that have clouded public health debates in the past.
