

Kaylan L. Phillips
Short Biographical Summary

Kaylan L. Phillips serves as Litigation Counsel for the Public Interest Legal Foundation.

She has litigated election law and constitutional law cases across the nation, from Washington state to Maine. She has extensive experience at every level of litigation in state and federal court, including the Supreme Court. She also has experience representing clients before federal and state administrative agencies.

Before joining Public Interest Legal Foundation, she was an associate at The Bopp Law Firm. She co-authored a law review article entitled “The Limits of Citizens United” (2012) with James Bopp, Jr.

She has also authored numerous amicus curiae briefs on key election law issues such as “one-person, one-vote” and noncitizen voting.

Ms. Phillips received her B.A. from the University of Oklahoma and J.D. from the University of Tulsa.

She is admitted to practice law in the State of Oklahoma, State of Indiana, the District of Columbia, and in several federal district and appellate courts.