

Samantha Hull is a parent of two young children and board director for the Pennsylvania School Librarians Association. She is a school librarian and district supervisor. She works closely with the public library and serves as a liaison by informing and aligning programming and opportunities for students and community members. Her work is rooted in lifelong learning and accessible resources.

In 2017, Samantha was named an American Library Association Emerging Leader. She holds an undergraduate degree in English from Lebanon Valley College and a Masters of Library Science from Clarion University of Pennsylvania. She is currently a PhD candidate in Instructional Design and Technology from Old Dominion University. She has been a librarian for eight years and previously was an English teacher.