

Christopher J. Madaio is an Assistant Attorney General in the Consumer Protection Division of the Maryland Office of the Attorney General. He leads enforcement and legislative efforts related to higher education, an issue that Attorney General Brian E. Frosh has made a top priority during his tenure. These efforts include investigating and prosecuting cases of unfair and deceptive trade practices, which have often been found to be carried out at for-profit educational institutions. Mr. Madaio has participated in a federal rulemaking panel advocating for the interests of State Attorneys General, testified before committees of the Maryland General Assembly resulting in the passage of six bills, and provided comment and testimony to the Department of Education, all in support of measures that protect students from unfair, deceptive, and abusive practices of schools, accreditors, and student loan servicers. Additionally, he has led multi-state efforts against schools for violations of state consumer protection laws, resulting in millions of dollars of debt relief for students.
