

Demond Drummer has committed his life to building a more just, equitable and sustainable economy. A proven strategist and innovator with a track record of developing solutions, building teams, and delivering results, Demond's leadership—in policy development, program design, technology and innovation—has been recognized by the Obama White House, Code for America, and the Aspen Institute.

He has worked with national organizations such as PolicyLink, where he served as Managing Director for Equitable Economy, and New Consensus, where he served as co-founder and executive director. He currently consults with the Institute on Race, Power and Political Economy at The New School in New York City.

Demond's work and analysis has appeared in national publications and media outlets such as The Washington Post, Politico and MSNBC.