

Erin Davis Valdez is education policy director at Texas Public Policy Foundation. She has been passionate about the transformational power of education all her life, having been given the gift of being homeschooled. She taught for over a decade in Austin-area schools and served as an assistant principal at a public charter school in Lewisville. These experiences have given her the opportunity to see first-hand how students can thrive when they have options that meet their unique abilities and interests.

Since joining the Foundation, Valdez has conducted research on career and technical education at the secondary and post-secondary levels, apprenticeships, higher education, and workforce development in Texas. She educates legislators and their staff on these issues and leads coalition efforts to bring employers' voices into education policy.

Valdez earned an M.A. in classics from the University of California, Santa Barbara and a B.A. in classical studies from Hillsdale College.
