Senior Fellow in Workforce and Public Finance

The Heritage Foundation

Rachel Greszler is a Visiting Fellow in Workforce at the Economic Policy Innovation Center (EPIC) and a Senior Fellow in Workforce and Public Finance at The Heritage Foundation.

Greszler's work focuses on policies that promote economic growth, individual freedom and well-being, and fiscal sanity. Specifically, she researches and writes about: expanding employment opportunities; independent work; women's issues; the minimum wage; paid family leave and other family-friendly workplace policies; Social Security; disability insurance; pensions; federal employee compensation; and improper federal government payments.

Greszler was previously a senior economist on the staff of the Joint Economic Committee of the Congress for seven years. She completed her graduate studies at Georgetown University, where she earned master's degrees in both economics and public policy. She also holds a bachelor's degree in economics from the University of Mary Washington, where she is currently a member of the Board of Visitors.
