

Matthew Duss is the president of the Foundation for Middle East Peace. Previously he was a senior policy analyst at the Center for American Progress, where his work focused on the Middle East and U.S. national security, and director of the Center's Middle East Progress program. He travels frequently to the Middle East, meeting with government officials, analysts, journalists and civil society activists.

Duss's writing has appeared in numerous publications and journals, including the New York Times, the Washington Post, the Los Angeles Times, Foreign Policy, Politico, the American Prospect, and Democracy. He appears regularly as a commentator on radio and television. Duss received an M.A. in Middle Eastern Studies from the University of Washington's Jackson School of International Studies, and a B.A. in political science from the University of Washington.