

Dylan Hedtler-Gaudette is the Director of Government Affairs at the Project On government Oversight, a nonpartisan, independent watchdog organization. Dylan has degrees in economics and political science from the University of Southern Maine and a graduate degree in international relations from Northeastern University. In his time at POGO, Dylan has worked on a wide range of policy issues, including government ethics; Pentagon accountability; federal spending issues; foreign influence/Foreign Agents Registration Act (FARA); judicial reform; and congressional capacity, among others. Dylan has previously testified at congressional hearings on judicial ethics and foreign influence. He has also been interviewed and quoted in a variety of media outlets, including the Washington Post, Fox News, Federal News Network, the Washington Free Beacon, the Washington Examiner, and NPR, among others. Dylan has also written published pieces for NBC and CQ Roll Call.