

Jennifer Bisceglie
Founder & CEO, Interos Inc.

Jennifer Bisceglie is the founder and CEO of Interos, the fast-growing global supply chain risk management and operational resilience company.

Interos empowers clients such as the U.S. Department of Defense, NASA, and a host of Fortune 500 companies to take control of risk for competitive advantage. Interos' pioneering multi-tier supply chain visibility, scoring and monitoring platform evolves organizations from lagging to leading indicators to get ahead of risk and protect enterprises from cyber-attacks, regulatory violations, financial weaknesses, natural disasters, ESG concerns and other multi-tier supplier shocks.

Named to Inc. magazine's 2023 Female Founders 200 List, Jennifer is a highly sought-after global supply chain architect and strategist with over 25 years of industry experience. She regularly appears in Bloomberg, Financial Times, Washington Post, CNBC, Yahoo Live, Forbes, BBC, and other top-tier media outlets. Jennifer has also been called on to share her expertise with numerous congressional committees and conferences, including the Congressional Cybersecurity Caucus, the Homeland Security Governmental Affairs Committee, and the U.S.– China Economic Security Review Commission.

As a woman business owner, Jennifer is a long-time advocate for empowering other female entrepreneurs, working on behalf of organizations including Women Impacting Public Policy (WIPP), where she served as a chairperson from 2010 through 2016. Jennifer was also previously selected as the U.S. delegate to the Women's 20, an engagement group to the G20 focused on addressing gender inequality.
