

Suzette Kent Short Bio

Suzette Kent is a global business transformation executive. She served as the Federal Chief Information Officer for the United States from 2018 until July of 2020. Her career has included leadership roles ranging from partner at Accenture and EY to managing director at JP Morgan. She currently leads her own advisory business through which she continues strategic transformation work with clients around the world, across industries and in the public and private sectors. Her career has always centered on technology transformation, cybersecurity, digital enablement, workforce development and ways that technology can be leveraged to solve challenges. Suzette is a strategic advisor to many companies, national security firms, and multiple emerging AI companies. Suzette also serves on the Boards of a bank, a public university, and develops emerging technology educational content for public company boards.

LinkedIn: Suzette Kent

Twitter: SuzetteKKent

