

Jonathan Choe is a Senior Fellow and journalist with Discovery Institute's Center on Wealth and Poverty. He primarily reports on the homeless drug crisis ravaging West Coast cities like Seattle and Los Angeles.

But he also covers other national topics and regularly conducts deep dive investigations for Frontlines Turning Point USA and O'Keefe Media Group.

Choe was one of several journalists and researchers invited to the White House last year to address the rise of domestic terror group Antifa and other far-left organizations in America.

He also makes frequent appearances on FOX News Channel, Newsmax, and other media outlets.

Choe has more than two decades of experience in television news, working on air for ABC, NBC, CBS, FOX, and Tribune Company. He has been nominated and honored with multiple industry awards including an Emmy.

Choe graduated with a journalism degree from Boston University's College of Communications. He is a New England native.
