BIOGRAPHY

Mike Furlough is Executive Director of HathiTrust Digital Library, an organization that preserves and provides access to millions of digitized books and journals from the collections of more than 130 member libraries. Previously Furlough served as the Associate Dean for Research and Scholarly Communications at the Pennsylvania State University Libraries (2006-2014), where his portfolio included preservation, special collections, and digital curation. He began his library career by developing and leading digital scholarship services at the University of Virginia Library (1998-2006). Getting the Word Out: Academic Libraries as Scholarly Publishers, which he co-edited with Maria Bonn, was published by the Association of College and Research Libraries in 2015. From 2011-2013 he served as faculty for the ARL/DLF/Duraspace E-Science Institute. He currently serves on the board of the Digital Preservation Network and The Future of the Print Record working group sponsored by the Modern Language Association and American Historical Association.
