

Franita Tolson is Vice Dean for Faculty and Academic Affairs and Professor of Law at University of Southern California Gould School of Law where she also holds a courtesy appointment in the Political Science and International Relations Department. Her scholarship and teaching focus on the areas of election law, constitutional law, legal history and employment discrimination. She has written on a wide range of topics including partisan gerrymandering, political parties, the Elections Clause, the Voting Rights Act of 1965, and the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments. Her research has appeared or will appear in leading law reviews including the Yale Law Journal, Stanford Law Review, California Law Review, University of Pennsylvania Law Review, and Vanderbilt Law Review. Vice Dean Tolson is one of the coauthors of the leading election law casebook, The Law of Democracy (Foundation Press, 6th ed., forthcoming 2022). Her forthcoming book, In Congress We Trust?: Enforcing Voting Rights from the Founding to the Jim Crow Era, will be published in 2022 by Cambridge University Press.

As a nationally recognized expert in election law, Vice Dean Tolson has written for or appeared as a commentator for various mass media outlets including The New York Times, The Los Angeles Times, Wall Street Journal, Reuters, and Bloomberg Law. She has testified before Congress on voting rights issues. She has also authored a legal analysis for an amendment to the U.S. Constitution, introduced by Senators Elizabeth Warren and Richard Durbin, that would explicitly protect the right to vote. During the fall of 2020, Vice Dean Tolson worked as an election law analyst for CNN. She currently co-hosts an election themed podcast, Free and Fair with Franita and Foley, with Ned Foley of The Ohio State University Moritz College of Law.