John Clocker

Deputy Chief Administrative Officer
U.S. House of Representative

John Clocker serves as Deputy Chief Administrative Officer for the U.S. House of Representatives. Mr. Clocker has over three decades of Legislative Branch experience, which touches all aspects of the administrative, financial, and technical operations of the House.

Prior to his service as Deputy CAO, Mr. Clocker served as Deputy Staff Director for Planning and Oversight with the Committee on House Administration where he effectively managed the Committee's oversight of day-to-day operations of the U.S. House, including administrative, technical, and security operations.

Mr. Clocker's extensive service within the Legislative Branch also includes six years working with House Information Resources as the Director of Web Systems. In that role, he worked to implement strategies to provide optimal web operations and services for the entire House community.

Mr. Clocker also has worked as the Technology Director for the Committee on Energy and Commerce and previously with the Committee on House Administration as Director of Technology Policy. He began his career in the House working as an aide to Congressman Bud Shuster of Pennsylvania, where he learned about the challenges House staff face supporting busy Members with their legislative and constituent service duties.

Mr. Clocker has a master's of science degree in technology management from George Mason University.
