BIO

Sean Dennis is an FBI Hazardous Devices School (HDS) graduate and former Bomb Squad Commander/Special Operations Sergeant for the Arapahoe County Sheriff's Office in Centennial Colorado (Metro area of Denver). During his career he was a Patrol Sergeant, SWAT team member and an Investigations sergeant before and while being on the Bomb Squad.

Sean was also the Assistant Emergency Manager for one of the largest counties in Colorado and a state certified HAZ-MAT Technician. He has been involved in the Bomb Technician/Explosive community for over 25 years and has been involved in high profile events and critical incidents which has assisted in developing his knowledge and skills as a Bomb Technician.

Sean is a co-founder and current President/CEO of the United States Bomb Technician Association (USBTA). He feels strongly in supporting the Bomb Technician community and has reached out to military EOD units and Public Safety Bomb Squads to listen and learn on what they would like to see in an organization like the USBTA. Sean has spent much of his time helping other organizations who have supported Bomb Technicians in need of assistance and supported training exercises between Military and Public Safety Bomb Technicians. He has formed great partnerships with many from the military and public safety communities and hopes to bring these two groups together in a strong viable partnership.
