

Sim J. Singh, Senior Manager of Advocacy & Policy

As Senior Manager of Policy & Advocacy, Singh's work focuses on grassroots and national advocacy against hate crime, school bullying, employer discrimination, and racial profiling. Singh has been quoted in publications that include CNN, NBC, and Huffington Post and has appeared on national and international broadcast interviews. Additionally, he has presented remarks to government offices and at national conferences, including the American Bar Association.

Singh works with federal agencies such as the TSA, DOT, ICE, and DHS to advise on civil rights and national security policies. Singh helped modernize Sikh cultural competency training resources for law enforcement on behalf of the U.S. Department of Justice, Community Relations Service and is a certified instructor on the course. Singh also serves a committee advisor to the International Associations of Chiefs of Police on Enhancing the Response to Hate Crime, and advises various state Attorney General's offices on hate crime and anti-profiling policy.

Singh is a licensed attorney admitted to practice in Washington, D.C. and Florida. Prior to joining the Sikh Coalition, he developed apps that provide free legal resources for highly vulnerable communities and worked in governmental affairs through prior positions at Facebook and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Born and raised in Germany, Singh comes from a multicultural background. Singh holds his Masters of Law from Georgetown University. Singh also holds degrees from other institutions including a Juris Doctor, and a Bachelors in Management Information Science and is an active member with the South Asian Bar Association of Washington, D.C.

Select articles, publications and appearances: The New York Times, ABC News, RNS, Times Ledger, NPR, India West, and Times of India.

