

Biography of Mohamed Elmenshawy

Mohamed Elmenshawy is a Resident Scholar at the Middle East Institute in Washington, DC. He writes a weekly column for Egyptian daily Al Shorouk News about the relation between the United States and the Arab World.

Previously he worked at the World Security Institute as Editor in Chief for two publications, Taqir Washington and Arab Insight.

He specializes in issues regarding Political Islam, Democratization, and Current Issues of the Middle East.

He is a regular commentator on Middle East politics in major international and Arabic media outlets such as BBC, CNN International, and Aljazeera, His writing regularly appear on Huffington Post, Christian Science Monitor, The New York Times, and others.

He teaches seminars about current issues of the Arab World at the Middle East Institute where he covers the religion and social fabrics and forces in the Arab World.

Education

- B.A. in Political Science at Cairo University, Egypt
- M.A. in International Relations and Middle Eastern Politics at University of Akron, OH
- MBA in International Strategy at American University, DC