

Security Operations – Deputy Executive Assistant Administrator

Steve Lorincz

Steven Lorincz is the Deputy Executive Assistant Administrator for Security Operations. Prior to assuming his current role in December 2022, he served as the Federal Security Director for the state of Michigan. In his new role, Lorincz oversees airport checkpoint, baggage, and air cargo screening operations for over 430 domestic airports and delivers advanced explosives detection capabilities through TSA's canine and explosives specialist teams. Internationally, Lorincz provides oversight for an additional 280 airports conducting last points of departure operations to and from the United States.

Mr. Lorincz is also responsible for enforcing regulatory compliance for transportation security worldwide, ensuring all modes of transportation including aviation, mass transit, passenger and freight rail, highway and motor carrier, maritime, pipeline, and air cargo are in compliance with domestic and international regulatory requirements.

Lorincz joined TSA in 2002 and was instrumental in establishing foundational practices for the Agency. His extensive experience and comprehensive knowledge of the airline transportation business and related security, risk management, operational, workforce management and regulatory compliance matters are vital to the success of Security Operations.

Lorincz has held multiple leadership positions including Federal Security Director for the state of Michigan, Assistant Federal Security Director-Screening at Detroit Metropolitan Wayne County Airport, and a member of the Administrator's Inclusion Action Committee.
