Attachment—Additional Questions for the Record

The Honorable Tim Murphy

1. As you have had time to reflect on your hearing testimony, do you have anything you wish to clarify or to elaborate relating to your testimony or in response to issues discussed at the hearing?
2. Have you or anyone you know been able to attend one of EPA's public listening sessions this Fall, during which EPA is attempting to solicit ideas and input from the public and stakeholders about 'the best Clean Air Act approaches to reducing carbon pollution from existing power plants?' If yes, please specify the date and location of that session. If you will not be able to attend one of EPA's ongoing public listening sessions, do you have any questions or feedback on this topic that you would like to take a moment now to share with EPA?
3. Why do energy prices tend to be lower, on average, in large coal-producing states than in states where coal plays a smaller role?

The Honorable Rene Ellmers

1. While the ash from coal combustion is a waste by-product, I know that it provides great benefit with concrete mix designs – supporting the development of higher strengths and better performance. My understanding is that despite the efforts of EPA to attempt to continue to permit such beneficial use of fly ash in their new ruling, the concrete industry remains concerned about liability risks associated with the handling and use of what will now be declared a hazardous material. Could you address these liability concerns and your personal perspective on the impact of this ruling on beneficial use of fly ash?
2. Many believe the impact of EPA regulation of CO₂ through the CAA will have a more significant negative impact on rural communities. Rural consumers use more coal fired generation (in many cases natural gas pipelines are not nearby) and coal reserves are close, readily available, thus more economical to use. Rural utilities including electric cooperatives built those plants for the right reasons. Rural communities produce coal so jobs will be impacted, a previously cheaper source of fuel will be more difficult to use and more expensive. It's a double whammy. Can you explain the residual effect this will have on agriculture, small business and the tax base (schools, local government services) of these local rural communities?
