Karen Kinzle Zegel is the President of the Patrick Risha CTE Awareness Foundation. The foundation was created in the memory of her son, Patrick Risha, who passed away from CTE in September 2014. As Patrick's mother, Karen is beyond heartbroken by his death and for years prior was saddened by his struggle. The mission of the foundation is help others impacted by CTE, and educate parents on the dangers of activities which involve head traumas, in order to prevent others from suffering the same horrific loss. Karen is a retired public school Nutrition Director. Her energy is now being focused on foundation activities which can be followed on the website STOPCTE.org, Facebook, and on Twitter @StopCTE. Karen received her Master's in Elementary Education from the California University of Pennsylvania and her BS in Business Administration from Indiana University of Pennsylvania.
