Mark has been professor in the School of Resource and Environmental Management at Simon Fraser University, Vancouver, since 1986 – interrupted from 1992-97 while he served as Chair and CEO of the British Columbia Utilities Commission. His PhD is from the Energy Economics and Policy Institute at the University of Grenoble. Internationally, Mark is known for his work since the 1990s on the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (Nobel Peace Prize in 2007, lead author on the 2011 Special Report on Renewables), the China Council for International Cooperation on Environment and Development (co-chair of the 2009 Task Force for Sustainable Use of Coal), and the Global Energy Assessment (convening lead author for sustainable energy policy). He is a research fellow at the CD Howe Institute and has over 100 academic publications. In 2009 he was named a fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, largely for his career research into the design and application of energy-economy models to assess the effectiveness and cost of sustainable energy policies. He has advised energy and environment policy makers around the world.
