John Kingston is the President of the McGraw Hill Financial Global Institute. He is also MHFI's Director of Market Insight. He assumed those roles in early 2015 after almost 30 years with Platts, the energy news and price reporting unit of McGraw Hill. As President of the Institute, John provides leadership and coordination of our global strategy for thought leadership. He partners closely with communications professionals, thought leaders and subject matter experts throughout MHFI as well as leading academic, business and nonprofit organizations to develop effective thought leadership programs. This work advances the mission of the Institute, which includes supporting global economic growth and job creation. At Platts, he filled many roles, including Director of News and Director of Oil, where he presented--and continues to do so--on oil markets before audiences and on numerous media outlets around the world. Prior to joining Platts, John worked for American Metal Market and for newspapers in New Jersey and Virginia. He is a graduate of Washington & Lee University.
