The Honorable Lisa Blunt Rochester (D-DE):

1. At a time when the horrific wildfires in California are reminding us all too well that we are already experiencing the impacts of climate change, we know we must move to 100% clean energy. And we can't make this transition quickly enough. It's not just the tragic situation happening in California right now. It's happening all over the country. In Delaware, extreme weather is wiping out our farmers' crops and hurting our state's tourism industry. Air pollution in our communities is getting worse. Make no mistake that the impacts of climate change are here now.

Transitioning to clean energy is not only necessary to protect our health and safety, but it is also an enormous economic opportunity. Economic opportunity coupled with innovation enhances America's competitive edge, economy, national security, and our quality of life. Companies are innovating. States are innovating through policy. Now it's time for the federal government to act.

- a. Mr. Izzo, do you believe a federal climate policy would help resolve tension between state policies and competitive markets?
