

Brian Douglas (Doug) Hoey is the Chief Executive Officer of the National Community Pharmacists Association. He has spent 20+ years working in and representing community pharmacies.

The National Community Pharmacists Association represents the owners, operators, and managers of more than 23,000 pharmacy small businesses. Over 50% of NCPA's members are in rural areas and many others serve underserved citizens. Two-thirds of NCPA's members provide pharmacist compounding services to their communities.

Hoey is a licensed pharmacist in Oklahoma, Virginia, and Texas and practiced for five years in pharmacy small businesses including his own family's pharmacy. While working at these local pharmacies, Hoey consulted for Long Term Care facilities, contributed to the pharmacy's growth into providing durable medical equipment, and expanding into home infusion services. Since 1996, Hoey has been at the National Community Pharmacists Association advocating for pharmacy small business owners and helping develop programs supporting local pharmacists work to care for their patients and remain economically strong. For five years, Hoey also developed and taught pharmacology courses at George Washington University and Marymount universities.

He is also a member of the Board of Directors for Surescripts, Mirixa, Pharmacy e-Health Information Technology, the Pharmacy Compounding Accreditation Board, and is on the dean's advisory boards for the University of Oklahoma, University of Mississippi, and Virginia Commonwealth University pharmacy schools.

His pharmacy degree is from the University of Oklahoma College of Pharmacy and his MBA is from the Oklahoma City University graduate school of business.
