Alison Bateman-House, PhD, MPH, MA is an assistant professor in the Division of Medical Ethics at NYU Langone Health and co-chair of the Working Group on Compassionate Use and Pre-Approval Access. She also serves as chair of the Compassionate Use Advisory Committee Infectious Diseases (CompAC ID) and as deputy chair of several other CompACs. She has advanced training in bioethics, public health, and the history of medicine, and she has written and spoken frequently on the history and ethics of using humans as research subjects and on pre-approval access to drugs. She served in the Peace Corps in Cote d'Ivoire; led a team of public health researchers in Louisiana after hurricanes Katrina and Rita; and has studied terminally ill cancer patients' knowledge and understanding of clinical research.
