

Lisa Daniels

Born and raised in Toronto, Canada I came to Michigan with my family in 1998.

As a stay-at-home mom, I kept busy volunteering at my children's schools, as well as enjoying many sporting events for both my kids and dance competitions for Arlyn.

In 2004 I decided to get my real estate license, which I employed for 5 years. With a love for baking, I decided to put my real estate career on hold and started a cottage industry baking company.

After my son's death in 2016, and having learned the details of what had really happened to Jamie, I decided to focus my attention on breaking the stigma of addiction.

In October, 2017, I gave my first presentation, sharing Jamie's story, and have continued from there. I am dedicated to ensuring that people understand that addiction can affect anyone – that no one is immune.
