

Therese Ball, Ogden Dunes, Indiana

Therese Ball is a former registered nurse and a patient advocate who lives with multiple sclerosis. Therese spent 20 years as a registered nurse, caring for patients across the country, but had to leave the field four years after her MS diagnosis to focus on her own health. After witnessing her patients' inability to afford their prescriptions and then experiencing difficulties paying for expensive drugs like Copaxone herself, Therese began sharing her story and advocating for more affordable prescription drug prices.
