

Benedic Ippolito is a senior fellow in economic policy studies at the American Enterprise Institute. His research focuses on a variety of topics within health economics, including the pharmaceutical market, Medicare Advantage, provider pricing, and the role of health care costs in the personal finances of Americans.

Dr. Ippolito has been published in a variety of leading peer-reviewed academic journals, including JAMA, American Economic Journal: Economic Policy, Health Affairs, and Georgetown Law Review. He frequently testifies before Congress and currently serves as an associate editor of Health Affairs Scholar.

Ippolito holds a PhD and an MS in economics from the University of Wisconsin-Madison and a BA in economics and mathematics from Emory University.