Gary M. Epstein
Federal Communications Commission

In April 2012 Gary Epstein rejoined the FCC. He serves as Chair of the Commission's Incentive Auction Task Force and Special Advisor to Chairman Wheeler. He leads the Incentive Auction Task Force as it carries out its vital responsibilities to implement the world's first broadcast television spectrum incentive auction.

Epstein was the founder and Global Chair of the Communications Practice Group of Latham & Watkins, a national and international law firm. For 25 years, he was Chair of the Practice Group and led the firm's Telecommunications Law Practice. His practice focused primarily on advising companies on United States regulations of telecommunications, satellite and broadcast providers. He also advised non-US governments and investors on privatizations and restructurings of telecom sectors and advised companies on such policies as US ownership restrictions and authorizations for international services.

Directly before rejoining the FCC, Epstein was the Managing Director and General Counsel of the Aspen Institute International Digital Economy Accords (IDEA) Project, a year-long project designed to identify ways to promote innovation, market access opportunities and promote the free flow of communications across borders on an open Internet.

Epstein served as team leader of the Economics and International Trade Team of President Barack Obama's Transition Team and as Executive Vice President of SkyTerra Communications, an advanced satellite company developing an integrated satellite-terrestrial communications network.

In previous roles at the FCC, he served as the Digital Television Coordinator and Chief of the Common Carrier Bureau.

Epstein graduated from Lehigh University with a B.S. in Electrical Engineering, with highest honors. He graduated from Harvard Law School with a JD, with honors.
