Alan is widely known and recognized as one of American racing's most influential individuals. For more than 35 years, Alan has devoted his legal practice and energies towards protecting and defending the best interests of horsemen and the betterment of the racing industry in North America. A 1972 graduate of American University with honors and a 1975 graduate of the University Baltimore School of Law, Alan was a former Maryland Assistant Attorney General and counsel to the Maryland Racing Commission. Alan is well-known for his representation of the Maryland Stewards in the infamous 1980 Preakness Stakes controversy involving Genuine Risk and Codex. He was a partner in the major Baltimore law firm Weinberg and Green (now Saul Ewing) before establishing his own law firm in 1991.

Alan is counsel to many racing industry and equine organizations, including the Drugs and Medications Program of United States Equestrian Federation. In addition to his law practice, Alan is Chairman and Chief Executive Office of the Thoroughbred Horsemen's Association. Alan is the longest serving director of the National Thoroughbred Racing Association and is Vice-Chairman of the Racing Medication and Testing Consortium. He is a frequent lecturer and has authored numerous articles.

In 2012 Alan was appointed to the New York Task Force on Racehorse Health and Safety that studied 21 equine fatalities at Aqueduct Race Track. He co-authored its widely acclaimed Report, and its safety and welfare recommendations are being implemented in racing jurisdictions throughout North America. In 2014, he was appointed by Governor Cuomo to serve on a New York Task Force on Jockey Health and Safety.

Alan is a lifelong Maryland resident and lives in Pikesville, Maryland with his wife, Randi. They have three sons.
