

Graham Dufault
Senior Director for Public Policy
ACT | The App Association

Graham Dufault is senior director for public policy at ACT | The App Association, representing more than 5,000 app makers and connected device companies in the mobile economy. Graham leads public policy initiatives in front of Congress on behalf the App Association's members. He has a JD with a concentration in communications law from George Mason and a bachelor's degree in economics from Emory University. Prior to joining the App Association, Graham was counsel for the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

Updated July 2021