

Sarah Frascch earned her undergraduate (B.S. in Mathematics and minor in Computer Information Technology) and law school degrees from Temple University in Philadelphia.

Since graduating from law school in 2006, Sarah has served as a Deputy Attorney General with the Pennsylvania Office of Attorney General's Bureau of Consumer Protection. In August 2016, she was promoted to Chief Deputy Attorney General, Director of the Bureau of Consumer Protection, where she oversees a team of attorneys, agents/investigators, and staff in their robust consumer mediation program, registrations of various entities, and investigations/litigation of cases involving alleged violations of local, state and federal consumer protection laws.