Name: David M. Bearden
Title: Specialist in Environmental Policy
Organization: Congressional Research Service
U.S. Library of Congress

David Bearden is a Specialist in Environmental Policy for the Congressional Research Service, a division of the U.S. Library of Congress. The Congressional Research Service provides non-partisan and objective research and analysis of public policy issues to assist Committees and Members of the U.S. Congress in the development of federal legislation, and the oversight of federal programs and activities.

Mr. Bearden joined the Congressional Research Service in 1990, and has worked with the U.S. Congress in multiple capacities since that time, authoring numerous reports, presenting seminars and briefings to Committees, Members, and their staff, and testifying as an expert witness at congressional hearings. Mr. Bearden has assisted the U.S. Congress with a variety of environmental issues during his tenure with the Congressional Research Service, and is their resident expert on the federal role in the cleanup of environmental contamination under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act, and other related federal environmental remediation and reclamation statutes.
