Michael A. Houlemard, Jr.

Michael A. Houlemard, Jr. currently serves as Executive Officer of the Fort Ord Reuse Authority, a broadly representative redevelopment corporation located on California's Monterey Bay. Mr. Houlemard's professional career spans 35 years in community planning, real property development and reuse, business training, and economic forecasting - managing several successful multi-interest partnerships to completing regional and larger-scale projects. Prior to assuming his current post in 1997, he served as Executive Assistant to the Chancellor and as Director of Community Planning and Land Development for the University of California Santa Cruz, and as a Deputy Director in the CA Department of Housing and Community Development.

In earlier career positions, Mr. Houlemard was employed as Pasadena Redevelopment Agency Project Manager, Southern California Urban Coalition Executive Director, Pasadena Urban Coalition Deputy Director, and University of California Santa Barbara Assistant Dean/Director - Office of Veterans' Affairs. Mr. Houlemard has provided a full array of topical public testimony before Congress and varying State, regional, and local legislative bodies. In addition, Mr. Houlemard has been a columnist for several local publications and authored articles for regional and national publications.

Michael Houlemard was born in New Orleans, Louisiana, and spent his formative years in Pasadena, California. He holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in Political Science from the University of California at Santa Barbara, a Master of Arts in Urban Studies from Occidental College, and is a fellow of the prestigious CORO Foundation Leadership Program. He continues as an active participant and/or officer on many public and private boards and commissions - including three years as President of the Association of Defense Communities (ADC). Past activities include appointments to statewide councils, Board membership of several community organizations, and memberships in several professional associations. Also, he is a 1991 graduate of the University of California Management Institute. In 2008, Mr. Houlemard represented the State of California on the National Governors Association "Federal Facilities Environmental Cleanup Working Group;" and in 2004, Mr. Houlemard was recognized by ADC as the Local Reuse Authority Executive of the Year.
