PARRIS N. GLENDENING

President, Smart Growth America's Leadership Institute and the Governors' Institute on Community Design: 2003 - present

A project of Smart Growth America, a nation-wide coalition of state, local, and national organizations, that advocates for people who want to live and work in great neighborhoods, while supporting businesses and jobs, providing more options for how people get around and making housing affordable.

Strategic Advisory Committee, AbTech Industries: 2014 - present

As Advisor to AbTech Industries, Parris N. Glendingen advises on green stormwater management and corporate policy.

Senior Advisor, Energy and Environment, National Strategies Inc.: 2008 - 2013

As Senior Advisor of Energy and the Environment for NSI, Parris N. Glendingen collaborates to develop legislative and market strategies for NSI clients and assist with policy development for major companies on energy and the environment.

Governor of Maryland: 1995-2003

Parris N. Glendingen became Maryland's 59th governor in 1995 and was re-elected in 1998. Governor Glendingen has 30 years experience as an elected official at the municipal, county, and state levels, combined with a significant record of public policy leadership positions in state and national governmental associations. An author and educator in government and politics, he is a creative problem-solver and change agent, exceptionally skilled in strategic decision-making, managing complex organizations, and raising and allocating financial resources.

Governor Glendingen's career has been marked by a commitment to education, the environment, and creating a fair, just and inclusive society. Under Governor Glendingen's leadership, Maryland received national acclaim for its unprecedented support for educational excellence, diversity and inclusiveness, and most notably, progressive environmental policies and programs. Governor Glendingen brought Maryland to national prominence through a series of innovative programs to reinvigorate established communities, preserve existing open space, protect natural resources, conserve scarce resources and protect wildlife. Recognized as a leading architect and advocate of the modern anti-sprawl, smart growth movement, Governor Glendingen's 1997 Smart Growth and Neighborhood Conservation initiative was the nation's first comprehensive, incentive-based effort to address growth and quality of life issues. Governor Glendingen has been the recipient of numerous honors and awards for his environmental activism and his many other contributions to Maryland and the nation. He continues to work as a national advocate for the environment and transit, especially high-speed rail. Glendingen also works on death penalty reform and support for gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender rights.
