Emily Donovan is a founding member of Clean Cape Fear--an alliance of educators, environmentalists, doctors, faith leaders, scientists, and concerned citizens all working together to hold Chemours/DuPont accountable for decades of pollution. Clean Cape Fear strives to spotlight deficiencies in governmental regulations that adversely impact our basic human right to clean, safe, and healthy drinking water.

Emily is also a Youth Director at Little Chapel on the Boardwalk, Presbyterian Church, U.S.A. located on Wrightsville Beach. She is a strong public advocate for social justice issues and regularly partners with community organizations to influence public policy that adversely impacts the "least of these" [Matthew 25: 44-45]. Prior to her ministry calling, she spent ten years in marketing communications working for a Global Fortune 500 company where she regularly traveled the world implementing marketing strategies.

Emily lives in Brunswick County with her husband, David, and boy/girl twins. She's been a resident of Brunswick County since 2009.
