

Diane VanDe Hei has served as the Executive Director and now the Chief Executive Officer of the Association of Metropolitan Water Agencies (AMWA) - a non-profit organization based in Washington DC. AMWA is an organization of the largest publicly owned water utilities in the United States and serves as the voice of metropolitan water systems on federal water policy issues, in addition to developing programs that foster sustainable and innovative utility management. Diane also serves as the Executive Director of the Water Information Sharing and Analysis Center, a service that fulfills the security needs of the water sector.