

Amanda Wilcox Goodin is a staff attorney with Earthjustice's Northwest office, and has been an attorney with Earthjustice since 2008.

Amanda has litigated national and regional matters in federal and state courts across the country. These range from matters that seek to promote a rapid and equitable transition from fossil fuels to clean energy, to matters seeking to institute financial responsibility requirements to ensure the worst polluters clean up hazardous spills quickly and thoroughly.

Amanda has been leading litigation to institute CERCLA financial responsibility requirements pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 9608 for nearly a decade, including litigation before the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals and rulemakings before EPA.

Prior to joining Earthjustice, Amanda clerked for the Honorable Diana Gribbon Motz, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. She graduated summa cum laude from N.Y.U. School of Law in 2007, with honors including a Furman Academic Scholarship; the Butler award for unusual distinction in scholarship, character, and professional activities; and the Cahn award for outstanding contributions to the N.Y.U. Law Review by a student editor. Amanda received her B.A. from Yale University in 2000.