Background

The proposed Susquehanna National Heritage Area encompasses both Lancaster and York counties in South Central Pennsylvania. The area currently holds a State designation as a Pennsylvania Heritage Area.¹

The Susquehanna Heritage Corporation is a local non-profit organization focused on the Susquehanna River and the communities and landscapes along the River in Lancaster and York Counties. It is part of Heritage PA, a network of State-designated Pennsylvania Heritage Areas. The Corporation advocates for local involvement in the area and since 2001 has helped raise over $18 million for the current State heritage area through local support, State and federal grants, and private donations.²

Named after the Susquhannock, an Iroquoian tribe that lived along the River, the Susquehanna River is approximately 444 miles long, making it the longest river on the East Coast and the 16th longest river in the United States. The River flows from upstate New York to the Chesapeake Bay passing along both Lancaster and York Counties in Pennsylvania. The Susquehanna is broad and shallow with an average daily flow of 22 billion gallons of water making it ideal for boating and fishing.³

Formed in 1729 after residents petitioned for a new county, Lancaster became the fourth county in Pennsylvania. Located along the Susquehanna River, Lancaster County quickly prospered and served as the State capital from 1799 to 1812.⁴ Today, the County is a tourist destination featuring Pennsylvania Dutch Country museums, outdoor activities, authentic Amish experiences, and a historic downtown.⁵

York County was founded in 1749 after being deeded to Pennsylvania by the American Indians who inhabited the area. Since its founding, many residents of the County played significant roles in the American Revolution and the Civil War. Following the Revolution, York County was primarily an agricultural community and served as a place for continued industrialization as the coal-burning locomotive was perfected in York County.⁶

H.R. 2991, the Susquehanna National Heritage Area Act, would establish the Susquehanna National Heritage Area in Pennsylvania and designate the Susquehanna Heritage Corporation as the local coordinating entity for the area.

The Subcommittee on Federal Lands held a legislative hearing on H.R. 2991 on April 11, 2018.
