

Robert L. Glicksman is the J.B. & Maurice C. Shapiro Professor of Environmental Law at the George Washington University Law School. His expertise covers environmental, natural resources, administrative, and property law. Professor Glicksman's books include NEPA Law and Litigation (Thomson Reuters 2024 ed.); Public Natural Resources Law (Thomson Reuters 2025 ed.); Environmental Protection: Law and Policy (Aspen Pub., 9th ed. 2023); Risk Regulation at Risk: A Pragmatic Approach (Stanford University Press 2003) (with Sidney Shapiro); Administrative Law: Agency Action in Legal Context (Foundation Press, 4th ed. 2025) (with Richard Levy and David Adelman); and Reorganizing Government: A Functional and Dimensional Framework (NYU Press 2019) (with Alejandro Camacho). His law review articles have appeared in top general and environmental law specialty law journals, and include recent articles on various environmental and natural resources law issues, including judicial review of agency decisionmaking under NEPA. He has an M.A. from Harvard University and a J.D. from Cornell Law School.