

“We should all agree that building things in America, creating better-paying jobs, and leading the world in affordable, reliable energy production is an American issue, not a left or right one.

If we intend to lead the world in economic growth and prosperity in the years to come, it is time to start building like it. The SPEED Act will help us achieve those goals, unleash critical energy resources and restore common sense to our permitting process, empowering local communities and bottom-up decision making by American innovators and entrepreneurs.”

- Emily Seidel, President, Americans for Prosperity
