

“The bipartisan SPEED Act brings long-overdue common sense back to our permitting system and ensures America can build the critical energy infrastructure we need. Removing needless bureaucratic red tape isn’t just good policy — it’s essential to strengthening our energy security, which is the backbone of our national security. When America controls its own energy future, America is safer and stronger. Congress should act quickly and pass the SPEED Act into law.”

- John Vick, Executive Director, Concerned Veterans for America