

“American AI and technological leadership depends on reliable energy and modern digital infrastructure. Updating federal reviews would allow companies to more quickly deploy infrastructure at scale, ensuring innovators have the resources necessary to compete globally. For these reasons, we applaud the SPEED Act, which would incorporate common sense reforms that allow the United States to build the infrastructure essential to winning the AI race.” - Brian McMillan, Vice President, Federal Affairs, Computer & Communications Industry Association (CCIA)