

Matt Anderson is director of Sutherland Institute's Coalition for Self-Government in the West. He has been featured in local, national and international media, including BBC, NPR, C-SPAN, BuzzFeed, the Washington Examiner and a variety of Associated Press articles. Matt is a regular contributor to The Hill and Deseret News.

Matt graduated from Utah State University in 2014 with a bachelor's degree in political science and is pursuing a master's of political science with an emphasis in public lands policy. He is an active member of his community – volunteering on political campaigns, serving as a state delegate and precinct chair – and he is involved with a number of conservation organizations. When Matt isn't working on public policy, you are likely to find him in Utah's Bear River Mountain Range fly-fishing, hunting or ATV riding.