

Anne-Marie Fennell, Director, U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO)

Anne-Marie Fennell is a Director in GAO's Natural Resources and Environment team. She oversees GAO's work on the federal government's management of public land and water resources, including national parks and forests, mineral resources, coastal and marine resources, and water supply.

Ms. Fennell joined GAO in 1988 and has conducted and led audits covering a range of issues, including the defense industrial base and worker protection issues. She became a Director in 2009 and moved to the Natural Resources and Environment team in 2012.

Ms. Fennell received a bachelor's degree from Wheaton College in Norton, Massachusetts. She also earned master's degrees in governmental administration and political science from the University of Pennsylvania.