

Elizabeth Klein is an experienced leader in clean energy, climate change, and environmental law and policy, currently serving as Senior Counselor to the Secretary at the Department of the Interior.

Klein is in her third tour of service at the Department of the Interior, having also served during the Clinton and Obama administrations advancing high priority initiatives such as Interior's renewable energy program and climate change adaptation efforts. Prior to joining the Biden administration, Klein was Deputy Director of the State Energy & Environmental Impact Center at NYU School of Law, which supports state attorneys general in defending and promoting clean energy, climate and environmental laws and policies.

Earlier in her career, Klein was an attorney at Latham & Watkins specializing in energy and environmental law issues and served as Director of Communications and Government Relations for the National Park Foundation prior to becoming an attorney.

Klein graduated with a degree in economics from the George Washington University and received her JD from American University's Washington College of Law.