

Anna St. John is president and general counsel of Hamilton Lincoln Law Institute, a public interest law firm dedicated to protecting free markets, free speech, limited government, and separation of powers, and against regulatory abuse and rent-seeking. She began working with the Center for Class Action Fairness, which has since moved to HLLI, in March 2015. The Center represents class members pro bono against abusive class action settlements and is dedicated to safeguarding consumers, shareholders, and the general public against abuses in the civil justice system.

Ms. St. John has argued appeals before the U.S. Courts of Appeals for the Second, Seventh, Ninth, and D.C. Circuits and state courts in New York and California, and presented argument to over a dozen federal and state trial courts. Her work has led to the return of over $100 million in settlement funds to class members.

Ms. St. John began her legal career clerking for the Honorable Rhesa H. Barksdale of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, and spent several years as an attorney in the Washington, D.C. office of Covington & Burling LLP. She is a graduate of Columbia Law School, where she was named a James Kent Scholar; received a Master of Arts from the Columbia Graduate School of Arts and Sciences; and received a Bachelor of Arts from Louisiana State University. She has spoken on topics of class action fairness and civil justice reform, regulatory abuses, federalism, feminism, the First Amendment, and the U.S. Supreme Court.
