Jamieson Greer is a partner in the International Trade team at King & Spalding. His practice covers trade remedies, trade policy and negotiations, export and import compliance, and CFIUS matters. He has represented clients in trade remedy litigation before the Department of Commerce, the International Trade Commission and federal courts. He has also assisted clients with advocacy before senior government officials and agencies with jurisdiction over international trade matters. His clients include companies in basic and advanced manufacturing, technology, energy, agriculture, and aerospace and defense sectors.

Jamieson has experience developing international trade compliance programs and training client employees, conducting trade-related internal investigations, and advising on international trade aspects of mergers and acquisitions.

Prior to joining King & Spalding, Jamieson was the Chief of Staff to the U.S. Trade Representative (USTR), Ambassador Robert Lighthizer. He worked very closely with Ambassador Lighthizer and senior White House officials on developing and implementing trade policy and advised the USTR on all aspects of the agency's mission. Jamieson was also deeply involved in the Administration's Section 301 investigation of Chinese forced technology transfer policies. He worked on the Phase One trade deal negotiations with Chinese officials and participated in numerous strategy sessions with Ambassador Lighthizer, the President and other cabinet members as part of that process. He was a critical part of USTR's efforts to negotiate and obtain Congressional approval of the new United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement. Jamieson participated in every major Administration trade action initiated during his three years at USTR.

Before working at USTR, Jamieson spent several years in private practice focusing on trade-related matters, from compliance with U.S. export controls to transactions subject to CFIUS's approval, trade remedies and antidumping laws.

Jamieson also served in the U.S. Air Force Judge Advocate General's Corps, including a deployment to Iraq. He served as both prosecutor and defense counsel in criminal investigations and courts-martial involving U.S. airmen.

Jamieson appears regularly in print and news media, including the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, Reuters, and the BBC.

Matters

Advising a trade association for advanced manufacturing on U.S. free trade agreement negotiations, World Trade Organization negotiations on intellectual property protections, Congressional advocacy, and related matters.

Managed a U.S. semiconductor manufacturer's licensing and advocacy efforts with respect to export control matters affecting billions of dollars in business; advising the company on a wide range of trade and national security matters involving China.

Advises several U.S. advanced manufacturers on competing in a global market and dealing with challenges from Chinese subsidies, discriminatory policies, and retaliatory actions.

Advising technology companies and related trade association on legal and policy responses to discriminatory digital services regulation in the EU, including transatlantic policy advocacy with senior government officials, press relations, and enforcement options.

Counseling energy companies on trade agreement and other remedies to challenge trade barriers and discriminatory laws and practices in the Mexican energy sector.

Advising U.S. manufacturers on investigations under the "rapid response" enforcement mechanism for the labor obligations of the USMCA, including the first-ever case brought under the mechanism against Mexico.

Led the J. R. Simplot Company's successful participation in countervailing duty investigations of phosphate fertilizers from Russia and Morocco, defending the U.S. industry from unfairly traded imports. This investigation included the first-ever countervailing duty allegations against Morocco.

Represented Briggs & Stratton LLC in the successful antidumping and countervailing duty investigations of vertical shaft engines from China.
