

John G. Malcolm

John G. Malcolm is the Vice President of the Institute for Constitutional Government, Director of the Meese Center for Legal and Judicial Studies, and the Ed Gilbertson and Sherry Lindberg Gilbertson Senior Legal Fellow at The Heritage Foundation, where he writes on a variety of legal issues.

An honors graduate from Columbia College and Harvard Law School, John clerked for federal judges in the Northern District of Georgia and on the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals. For 10 years, John worked at the Department of Justice as an Assistant United States Attorney, an Associate Independent Counsel, and a Deputy Assistant Attorney General in the Criminal Division. John received numerous awards for his service, including the Director's Award for Superior Performance by an Assistant United States Attorney.

From 2004 through 2009, he served as an Executive Vice President and Director of Worldwide Anti-Piracy Operations for the Motion Picture Association. John then served as a Distinguished Practitioner in Residence at Pepperdine Law School. From 2010 to 2012, John was the General Counsel at the U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom.

John has also been actively involved in many charitable and civic organizations and was confirmed by the U.S. Senate in 2019 to serve on the Board of Directors of the Legal Services Corporation, the largest funder of civil legal aid for low-income Americans.
